EARTH MIGHT GET REFUSE FROM COMET

Watch the skies tonight, for then, so they say, great things will come to pass. Pons-Winnecke, that Franco-German comet that has attracted universal attention, is due to shower the earth with meteors.

Of course that is only what some say. We all remember what was going to happen when Halley's comet was supposed to bump the earth a few years ago. Some said we would pass through the tail, but we are still here.

Sometime the latter part of the week the earth is due to pass the point where the comet was 10 days ago and this leads certain scientists to believe that we will collect some of the refuse spread in the path of Pons, Pons and Herr Winnecke.

A New York actress is reported contemplating refusing a bequest of $2,000,000, and this action should be worth almost as much as a press agent exploit.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE SAGEBRUSHER" AT THE BUTLER TODAY

Where is the man who said that nothing thrillingly new could be evolved in man-to-man fights in motion pictures? Whoever it was has not seen Benjamin B. Hampton's Great Authors' production, "The Sagebrusher," photoplay of the famous novel of that title by Emerson Hough which will be shown as a headline attraction at the Butler today.

Looking back over the huge variety of big fights in picture clippings, it seems as though there is no longer any room for change. Film directors have made their fights a storm on land and sea, on top of cliffs, in balloons and airplanes, in border saloons and in the delicacy of elegant feminine boudoirs.

It remained for Emerson Hough, the novelist, to reproduce for the screen an incident he had witnessed nearly 30 years ago. Roy Stewart and Edwin Walcott, in the roles of hero and villain fight desperately on the roof of a shanty that is drifting, half submerged, down the roaring flood caused by the bursting of a huge power dam in a narrow mountain canyon. It is one of the greatest fights ever screened, and the picture is a film masterpiece, called that by every critic.

Tomorrow a George Fitzmaurice production, "Paying the Piper," with an all-star cast a picture you will like to look at.

CANNOT DECIDE WHAT TO DO WITH KLAMATH RIVER

(By Associated Press.) SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—Vandalism or playground, which shall be Klamath river valley? This question, whether turbines burning electricity out of the Klamath's waters to operate big factories are more necessary for the people of California than a big outdoor playground along the river and one large stream devoted to salmon and steelhead for sportmen is the question that has been put up to the federal power commission to solve.

Along with it is the problem of whether the need for electricity plants higher in the bay than a food supply for the Indians.

If the Electro Metals company of an Francisco, whose power application the California fish and game commission is opposing, is allowed to build dams across the Klamath, the last good salmon and steelhead stream in the state will be spoiled forever, according to the commission.

No salmon could climb the fishways in the three dams, 70 to 300 feet high, that the corporation proposes to build, the state officials contend, since 45 feet is the highest successful fish ladder. Steelhead, the brook trout who migrate to the sea when young and return to spawn, will be crushed in the tremendous pressure of the turbines, they assert.

The Electro Metals company, in a hearing held at Requa, Del Norte county, on May 26, revealed plans for building transmission lines from the proposed plants to Trinidad, on the coast, 25 miles north of Eureka. At Trinidad, which their officials described as a harbor, their plans call for a smelter to make aluminum out of ore brought in ships from British Columbia, South America.

The dams will be built, it was stated, across the Klamath at the mouths of two tributaries, the Salmon and the Trinity, with a third dam between these two.

Since the state of California and the federal government are co-operating in building a highway 160 miles long paralleling the river so as to open it up to sportsmen and summer campers, the Klamath river should be the people's playground rather than their workshop, Charles A. Vogelsang, executive officer of the commission, asserted at the hearing.

Many Indians and white people living along the river are largely dependent on the fish for their food supply, he said, and the canneries operating near the mouth of the river also will be crippled by the power projects, it was stated. The fish and game commission urged that the dams be built on smaller tributary streams rather than on the Klamath itself. Fred Fowler of the San Francisco office of the forestry service presided at the hearing and his findings will be submitted to the federal power commission at Washington. A hearing also must take place before the state water commission but no action by either body is expected until next year.

A center of gravitation was a big advantage the hammock had over the porch swing.

STATE POLICE WILL ENFORCE LAW AND ORDER

When this morning's train arrived from Reno, it had aboard 25 uniformed state police and several plain clothes police, who were sent into Tonopah by the governor to protect the new laborers brought in by the mining companies to operate their mines and mills, which have been operative up to a few weeks ago, when outside men were brought in to take the places of those who walked out April 16.

In an interview with R. B. Henrichs, captain of the state police, who also is warden of the Nevada state prison, he stated to a Bonanza representative that the police were here to co-operate with the sheriff and chief of police and would insist that law and order prevail at all times. The new men working for the mining companies will be allowed the freedom of the city and must not be molested or intimidated. Today all is quiet in Tonopah and the general discussion of its people is the arrival of the state police.

STATE BANKERS MEET AT MINDEN

The opening session of the eleventh annual convention of the Nevada Bankers' association was called to order in the C. V. L. C. theatre at Minden Saturday afternoon by President William Pitt of Lovelock.

After the invocation by the Rev. P. H. Willis and the singing of "America" by all present, Governor Boyle delivered the opening address in the course of which he emphasized the need of co-operative relations between the government and the banking interests, and a high conception of public trusteeship. He predicted that when adjustments in world affairs were effected Nevada's industrial awakening will be on a scale far greater than dreamed by most of her citizens. He declared that only 300 of the 1800 producing mining properties of the state are now being operated. He urged the bankers to keep the note of optimism high in their deliberations.

side circling the valley which will be continued today and Tuesday. There were 25 men out Saturday riding 75 yards apart and 5000 acres of land were tested. According to government estimates taking into consideration the progress to date, 234,000 acres of land in Elko county will be treated during 1921 at a saving of near a quarter of a million dollars, allowing that rodents destroy one dollar's worth of crop or range vegetation to every acre. This is a conservative estimate, as experiments show that the average destruction is valued at $1.50 to $2 per acre.
